

America – NOT Russia – is Europe's enemy.

ERIC ZUESSE—Now that Europe's economies are doomed, the fact is especially clear that, as I had headlined on 11 September 2021, "America Is Europe's Enemy":

What is the likelihood that Russia, China, or Iran – the three main targeted nations that the U.S. Government has (ever since 1945) been trying to first isolate, by removing the target-country's allies, and, then grab and control – will actually, themselves, invade Europe? Is that likelihood near zero? (What would any of them gain by even trying to invade Europe? Would they likely be stupid enough to want to do it?) Then why does Europe participate in America's aggressions (sanctions, coups, and invasions)? These are aggressions that create problems even within Europe itself.
